Student Responsibilities and Behavior Form:

University Student Code of Conduct:
As a representative of Texas Tech University and the College of Architecture, student will adhere to the University Student Code of Conduct. Participation in Study Abroad Program carries the same expectations.

Behavior:
Student will be removed from the program if student’s behavior or actions impede or obstruct the progress of the Program in any way or if actions endanger others or self. In addition to the university regulations, this is the discretion and determination of the program leaders.

Financial Responsibility Upon Dismissal:
Dismissal from the program carries with it the financial responsibility for all expenses incurred in returning to the United States and may be financially responsible for the return of all or part of any financial aid received related to the study abroad program.

Local and Federal Laws:
Student must adhere to any and all local and federal laws in the countries visited during the program period.

Many countries have very harsh laws on the possession and/or consumption of controlled substances. Each country carries its own laws independent of other countries. Student is subject to all local laws and is responsible for knowing these laws. In addition, association with others involved in illegal behaviors is considered misconduct and subject to dismissal from the program.

Participation in activities that promote religious, political, or personal agendas can be deemed illegal and as such, could place the student in legal jeopardy or imprisonment. Students agree to refrain from participating in such activities or behaviors.

In cases of emergency - student will follow instructions of local authority first.

Medication:
Student must confirm that any prescription medications taken may be legally brought into the countries to be visited.

Student Work/Course Attendance:
Student must arrive at studio promptly and remain during the entire class period. Absences from any planned or scheduled meeting will result in a grade reduction. Habitual absences that impede the program in any manner, subjects student to removal from the Program. Students must participate fully in all Program activities.

Coursework:
Student will provide all work required by program leaders in the format required for course credit by the deadline required.
Accommodation/Class Facility:
Student will be held financially responsible for any damages to the apartment of residence, hotels, and classroom facility for the duration of the program.

Notifications:
Student will notify faculty leader of any illness or injury immediately.
Student will notify faculty leader of any travel outside of the program activities during the program period of May 28 – July 8, 2017.

Safety:
Student is advised not to go out alone or travel alone.

Financial Emergency:
Student will plan accordingly for financial emergencies that could arise due to theft, illness (if required to pay for doctor’s appointment upfront and file claim later), national catastrophe, etc…

Faculty Leaders Held Harmless:
Faculty leaders are not responsible for student actions and will not provide assistance should you be removed from the program for any violation.

I have read, understand and agree to comply with the University Student Code of Conduct and all items noted on this document.
